

Talk #Aesthetics

Follow us on Twitter @aestheticsgroup

#NewBook
Dr Stefanie Williams
 @DrStefanieW
 Got a first draft of my #NewBook finished after a week of writing in the beautiful @grayshotspa in Surrey - the view out of my window!

#Training

Harley Academy @HarleyAcademy
 Our Botox and fillers mentoring sessions are underway for 2017 #Botox

#DermalFillers
Dr Simon Ravichandran
 @Ravichand1Simon
 On my way to one of my favourite cities #Dublin for a jawline #Radiessse masterclass tomorrow

#Offers

Jemma Patton @JemmaAesthetics
 Shocked to see well known clinics offering discounts & limited offers on Botox. The rules are there for a reason! #GMC #pom

#PatientSafety
P&D Surgery @pdsurgery
 New Year Resolution...get my yearly update on life support #patientsafety

#Clinic

Dr Razwan @Skyn_Doctor
 One of the busiest clinics of the year. Privileged to treat all those who attended Skyn Doctor today!

#Dermatology
Dr Ariel Haus @Dr_Haus
 Yesterday I was delighted to tour the excellent facilities of the Skin Hospital in Sydney. This is the centre of excellence. #Dermatology

Industry standards

RCS urges surgeons to apply for new certification

The Royal College of Surgeons (RCS) has launched a new system of certification with the aim of making the cosmetic surgery sector safer for patients.

The online system aims to help patients to identify a surgeon with the appropriate training, experience and insurance to perform a specific procedure. In order to receive certification, surgeons will have to provide evidence of their training, professional skills, clinical skills, knowledge and experience. They will also have to attend an RCS-accredited professional behaviours masterclass.

"You only have to look through the adverts in lifestyle magazines to know cosmetic surgery is a booming industry in the UK," said Mr Stephen Cannon, chair of the Cosmetic Surgery Interspecialty Committee (CSIC) and vice president of the Royal College of Surgeons. He added, "What many don't know is that the law currently allows any doctor – surgeon or otherwise – to perform cosmetic surgery in the private sector."

Mr Cannon continued, "We hope it will improve the reputation of a profession, which at times, comes under intense criticism in the media, sometimes with good reason."

Multipurpose platform

Lynton Lasers launches new LUMINA model

Aesthetic equipment manufacturer Lynton Lasers has launched a new model of the LUMINA laser and IPL platform.

The LUMINA combines five different technologies into one platform, providing treatments for hair and tattoo removal, antiageing, skin rejuvenation, pigmentation, acne, scarring, deep veins and skin resurfacing. Other components of the new model include two IPL handpieces, a long pulsed Nd:YAG upgrade that aims to treat all skin types, including darker skin, and a laser upgrade for the removal of multi-coloured tattoos. Managing director of Lynton Lasers, Jon Exley, said, "The LUMINA has established itself as the device of choice for many aesthetic practices because of its unique flexibility to be upgraded with a variety of different technologies. Therefore it presents clinic owners with an opportunity to invest in just one sole platform but with more than 24 different revenue streams readily available to their client base."